The detainee Yahya Ka'Ka is standing on the left of the picture whilst his younger brother, AbdulGhani Ka'ka, is standing on the right, who was killed by the Syrian regimes forces in Salah AlDeen Neighbourhood on 4/05/2012 when he went out to protest on that day.

The Syrian network for human rights believes that the Syrian government are responsible for the life of Yahya Ka'ka and demands the international community to take immediate action to reveal the fate of thousands of detainees, many of whom are losing their lives on a daily basis under severe torture which humanity has not witnessed anything similar to, to this day. This torture is committed by a regime that has no value for the ethical and humanitarian standards of the detainees, amid the absence of an international humanitarian order which is not taking its legal responsibility or abiding by its roles towards what the detainees are facing inside the prisons of the Syrian regime.
