

Statement on filing a complaint on an enforced disappearance case for the United Nations' Working Team

The citizen Hassan Muhammad Amin al Hamwi has been forcibly disappeared since 2015

The SNHR has briefed the UN Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances on the case of the citizen, Hassan Muhammad Amin al Hamwi from Homs city, born in 1972, who was working as a butcher prior to his arrest. He was arrested on April 5, 2015, by personnel from the Syrian Regime's Political Security Force, while he was passing through one of the regime's checkpoints in Homs city, as he was heading to work, and taken to an undisclosed location. Since that date, he has been forcibly disappeared. His fate remains unknown to the SNHR, as well as to his family.

The SNHR has also briefed the Special Rapporteur on the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms while countering terrorism, as well as briefing the UN Special Rapporteur on the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, specifically in regard to Hassan's case.

The SNHR has also briefed the Special Rapporteur on the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms while countering terrorism, as well as briefing the UN Special Rapporteur on the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, specifically in regard to Mahmoud's case.

The Syrian authorities have denied any connection with the enforced disappearance of the citizen, Hassan Muhammad Amin al Hamwi. The SNHR has been unable to determine his fate, as have his family members, who fear that they may be arrested and tortured by regime personnel themselves if they continue to ask about his whereabouts and fate, as has happened in numerous previous cases.

The SNHR has called on the United Nations Committee on Enforced Disappearance, the United Nations Committee on the promotion and protection of human rights and fundamental freedoms while counter-acting terrorism, and the UN Special Rapporteur on the right of everyone to the enjoyment of the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, to intervene and to demand that the Syrian authorities release Mahmoud immediately, as well as to secure the release of thousands of other forcibly disappeared citizens whose whereabouts and current conditions must also be revealed.

Although the Syrian government is not a party to the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearances, it is indisputably a party to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Arab Charter on Human Rights. Enforced disappearance constitutes a violation of both instruments.

SNHR also confirms that there are well-founded fears that many of those forcibly disappeared by the Syrian regime since 2011 may have been subjected to torture and possibly killed in regime detention, with the number of citizens forcibly disappeared by the regime continuing to grow.
