

The Full Documentation of Jarjisa Massacre in Hama suburbs

Jarjisa is one of the villages of Hama suburbs that is located on northwestern side of Al Raŝtan dam. The village is administratively affiliated to Horbansfa district in Hama governorate. It is 35 kilometers to the south of Hama city, and it is populated by about 3000 people. The village is known for its abundant crops and ranching. Also, it is located directly on the Orontes River's bank.

The village location on the map

This small village was targeted in a concentrated shelling by the Syrian army's Al Handasa division in Toumin village, and also by the tanks stationed at Horbanfsa train station and Al Zara station.

As a result of this barbarian indiscriminate shelling, no less than 13 of the village residents were killed including three children and two women. Also, 115 others at least were wounded who were mostly children and women where we were able to document 8 critical cases.

According to the victims' families, and the eyewitnesses and activists whom we only managed to speak to, we recorded the names of the 13 victims who have fallen

As a human rights organization that is concerned with defending human rights, we, at the Syrian Network for Human Rights, strongly condemn this horrifying massacre that is considered as a crime against humanity as well as all the massacres against the Syrian people. We hold the Syrian regime, in its entirety, and the commander-in-chief of the Syrian Armed Forces Bashar Al Assad directly and fully responsible for this massacre as well as all repercussions and retaliations to this crime. Furthermore, we hold Iran, Russia, and Hezbollah directly responsible for the killings as they continue to provide the Syrian regime with weaponry and finance. We urge the Security Council and the United Nations to take every possible step to protect the civilians in Syria and uphold their moral and legal responsibilities, and to accelerate the steps towards referring all those who were involved to the International Criminal Court.
